

TAS Psychology & Wellbeing Pty Ltd

Position Description | Provisional Psychologist (5+1 Internship Pathway)

Location: Brookwater / Greater Springfield, Queensland (clinic-based, with possible school, community and telehealth work)

Employment arrangement: Negotiable, subject to operational needs and internship approval

Reports to: Practice Director / supervising psychologist, within the approved supervision structure

Position overview

TAS Psychology & Wellbeing is seeking a motivated Provisional Psychologist undertaking, or eligible to undertake, the 5+1 internship pathway towards general registration. The position provides supervised experience in psychological assessment, evidence-based interventions, clinical documentation and multidisciplinary collaboration with children, adolescents and adults. All duties and client allocations will be appropriate to the intern's competence, registration conditions and approved internship plan.

Key responsibilities

- Provide psychological services within the scope of provisional registration, competence and approved supervision arrangements.
- Assist with intake, assessment, case formulation, goal setting, intervention planning and review.
- Deliver evidence-based interventions, including CBT-informed strategies, under appropriate supervision.
- Develop skills in psychological and psychometric assessment, including test administration, scoring, interpretation and report preparation as authorised and supervised.
- Maintain timely, accurate and confidential clinical records, progress notes, correspondence and reports.
- Identify, document and promptly escalate risk and safeguarding concerns in accordance with practice procedures and supervisor direction.
- Communicate professionally with clients, families, referrers and relevant stakeholders with appropriate consent.
- Participate in supervision, reflective practice, professional development and internship competency reviews.
- Follow practice policies on privacy, consent, record keeping, child safety and professional conduct.

Essential eligibility and qualifications

- Completion of an APAC-accredited fifth-year psychology qualification (such as a Master of Professional Psychology), or another qualification accepted for the 5+1 pathway.
- Current provisional registration with the Psychology Board of Australia through Ahpra, or eligibility to obtain it before commencing relevant duties.
- Eligibility for, or enrolment in, an approved 5+1 internship with appropriate Board-approved supervision arrangements.
- Right to work in Australia; relevant identity and qualification documentation.
- Current or obtainable Queensland Blue Card and NDIS Worker Screening clearance (Yellow Card), where required for allocated duties.
- Satisfactory National Police Check and professional referees.
- Strong written communication, ethical judgement, organisation and willingness to learn.

Desirable experience

- Experience supporting children, adolescents, adults or people with disability.
- Interest in CBT, neurodevelopmental presentations, mental health and psychological assessment.
- Familiarity with clinical practice software, telehealth and multidisciplinary service delivery.

Supervision and professional development

External supervision is intended to be arranged through Provisional Psychologist Hub, subject to confirmation of each applicant's eligibility, scholarship availability, supervisor approval and Psychology Board requirements. Scholarship-funded supervision may be available for eligible applicants; funding is not guaranteed. TAS Psychology & Wellbeing will provide suitable workplace support, case discussion and learning opportunities consistent with the approved internship plan. The final supervision structure and responsibilities must be confirmed before commencement.

Application requirements

Please provide a CV, cover letter, academic transcripts, evidence of qualification and registration status, relevant screening clearances (if held), and details of your 5+1 internship and supervision/scholarship eligibility. Applications may be sent to admin@taspsychology.com.au.

Important note

Appointment is conditional on verification of qualifications, registration, screening requirements, appropriate supervision arrangements and suitability for the role. This description may be refined to align with the successful applicant's approved internship plan.
